My Speciality is «Economics»

I finished school two years ago and entered Moscow State Industrial University. The University has three departments: the full-time (day-time) department, the part-time (evening) one, as well as the department of distance education. I study at the faculty of Economics, Management and Information Technologies. The faculty trains bookkeepers (accountants), auditors, managers, economists and experts in information systems. The students try to get profound knowledge in economics, bookkeeping (accounting), analysis of financial activity, management, marketing, the bases of different kinds of business organization, as well as, operating computer systems.

Undergraduates specializing in economics for four years take Ec.B. degree after submitting their diploma works.

After graduating from the University the graduates must know all types of business organization (sole proprietorship, partnership, corporation), their advantages and disadvantages. Proper management, marketing and advertising are of great importance for business specialists. They should know the work of storing, advertising, data processing.

Thus they must be energetic, communicative, must know computer and information technologies, as well as, foreign languages, at least, English. In short, they should be aware of selling the right product, at the right time, in the right place, if they want to be a success.

Тема 1.2 Что изучает экономика

TEXT

WHAT IS ECONOMICS?

It is difficult to give a full and accurate definition of economics, but it is possible to indicate what problems economists are interested in. They are factors that affect prices of goods and services and also resources necessary to produce them. Economists are also interested in sellers' and buyers' behaviour in the market, in the relationship between "price system" and "market mechanism".

Now economics is more complex. There are three main approaches to economics: microeconomics, macroeconomics, and development economics. There are also several specialized areas of study. Among them are money economics, international economics, labour economics, industrial economics, agricultural economics, growth economics, mathematical economics, etc.

Like many other sciences, economics uses models to understand economic problems. A model often helps an economist to make correct predictions. The economist usually follows several rules when he makes a model of economic behaviour.

First, real life is complex and it is not possible for an economist to include all the details in a model. So, a model is an abstraction from real life. A model usually includes only essential elements and relationships of a particular economic situation.

Second, if an economist has two different models of one phenomenon, he always chooses the model that predicts the results of a particular phenomenon more accurately.

Third, although models are helpful in economic analysis, an economist always studies the actual economic situation before he makes decisions.

It is not enough to make models, it is also necessary to collect and study actual data in order to know how accurate a model is.

Тема 1.3 Глагол to be

Глагол to be в английском языке

Значение глагола to be - "быть, находиться". В отличие от других английских глаголов, глагол to be спрягается (т.е. изменяется по лицам и числам).

В отличие от русского языка, в английском языке глагол-связка никогда не опускается, поскольку английское предложение имеет строго фиксированный порядок слов: подлежащее (subject) + сказуемое (verb) + дополнение (object)

I am a doctor. Я врач. (Я есть врач.)

The weather is bad. Погода плохая.

They are from Paris. Они из Парижа.

Глагол to be не требует вспомогательного глагола для образования вопросительной или отрицательной формы.

Чтобы задать вопрос нужно поставить глагол to be перед подлежащим:

Am I happy? Is the book interesting? Is he our teacher?

Для образования отрицательной формы достаточно поставить отрицательную частицу not после глагола to be:

I am not happy. The book is not interesting. He is not our teacher.

Спряжение глагола to be в настоящем времени Present Simple:

I am	I am not	Am I?
He is	He is not (he isn't)	Is he?
She is	She is not (she isn't)	Is she?
It is	It is not (it isn't)	Is it?
We are	We are not (we aren't)	Are we?
You are	You are not (you aren't)	Are you?

Спряжение глагола to be в прошедшем времени Past Simple:

I was	I was not (I wasn't)	Was I?
He was	He was not (he wasn't)	Was he?
She was	She was not (she wasn't)	Was she?
It was	It was not (it wasn't)	Was it?
We were	We were not (we weren't)	Were we?
You were	You were not (you weren't)	Were you?

Спряжение глагола to be в будущем времени Future Simple:

Утвердительное предложение	Отрицательное предложение	Вопросительное предложение
I will be	I will not be (I won't be)	Will I be?
He will be	He will not be (he won't be)	Will he be?

It will be	It will not be (it won't be)	Will it be?
We will be	We will not be (we won't be)	Will we be?
You will be	You will not be (you won't be)	Will you be?
They will be	They will not be (they won't be)	Will they be?

Оборот there is/there are в английском языке

Оборот there is/there are в английском языке употребляется, когда нужно указать на наличие какого-либо лица или явления в определенном месте. После оборота there is/there are ставится подлежащее.

There is a lamp on the table. На столе (находится) лампа.

There was a storm last night. Прошлой ночью была буря.

Перевод предложений с этим оборотом начинается обычно с обстоятельства места.

Если подлежащее выражено существительным во множественном числе, то глагол to be после there ставится также во множественном числе.

There are two lamps on the table. На столе (находятся) две лампы.

При изменении времени изменяется форма глагола to be:

There was a lamp on this table. На этом столе была лампа.

There were three cars in the yard. Во дворе было три машины.

There will be a crystal chandelier over this table. Над этим столом будет хрустальная люстра.

Отрицательная форма образуется при помощи отрицания no, которое ставится после глагола to be перед существительным.

There is no lamp on the table. На столе нет лампы.

Если перед существительным стоит определение, выраженное местоимениями any, much и др., то после глагола to be ставится частица not.

There is not any lamp on the table. На столе нет (никакой) лампы.

There is not much snow in the street. На улице не много снега.

Вопросительная форма при употреблении глагола to be в Present Simple или Past Simple (или Present и Past Indefinite) образуется путем постановки глагола to be на первое место — перед there.

Is there a lamp on the table? На столе есть лампа?

При наличии сложной формы глагола (т.е. при наличии вспомогательных или модальных глаголов) вспомогательный или модальный глагол ставится перед there, а глагол to be — после there.

Will there be an English lesson at 3 o'clock? Будет ли урок английского языка в три часа?

При постановке вопроса к подлежащему с оборотом there is/there are употребляется вопросительное слово what, которое является подлежащим предложения. Глагол to be в этих случаях всегда употребляется в единственном числе, даже если вопрос ставится в отношении наличия нескольких предметов или явлений.

What is there on the table? Что на столе?

НО: В ответе на такой вопрос глагол to be употребляется во множественном числе, если констатируется факт наличия нескольких предметов или явлений.

What is there on the table? Что на столе? There are some books. Несколько книг.

Вопросы к другим членам предложения с этой конструкцией строятся по общему правилу.

Краткие ответы на вопрос, содержащий оборот there is/ there are, также строятся по общему правилу.

Are there any books on the table? — На столе есть какие-либо книги? —

Yes, there are (some). Да, есть. (No, there aren't.) (Нет.)

Тема 1.4 Секторы экономики

TEXT

SECTORS OF ECONOMY

There are three main sectors in any¹ economy: the primary sector, the secondary sector, and the tertiary sector.

The primary sector of economy includes industries that get goods from nature, such as agriculture and mining. There are two main branches in agriculture: crop and animal farming. Mining partially belongs to the secondary sector as mineral resources need industrial processing. Forestry, fishing, and beekeeping also belong to this sector.

Manufacturing industries which produce goods by means of mechanical, electrical or chemical, but not manual, processing of resources belong to the secondary sector. People who do not produce goods but provide different services for plants and factories work for the secondary sector, for example plant and factory managers. The sector also includes companies that provide fuel, energy, and transport for manufacturing.

The tertiary sector provides different services to consumers, such as trade, transport, banking, insurance and other public services. Teachers, doctors, tourist agents, drivers, lawyers, etc² work in the tertiary sector.

Тема 1.5 Времена Present Simple и Present Continuous

Present Simple - простое настоящее время

Время Present Simple обозначает действие в настоящем в широком смысле слова. Оно употребляется для обозначения обычных, регулярно повторяющихся или постоянных действий, например, когда мы говорим о чьих-либо привычках, режиме дня, расписании и т. д., т. е. Present Simple обозначает действия, которые происходят в настоящее время, но не привязаны именно к моменту речи.

Образование Present Simple

Утвердительные предложения:

I play

He / she / it plays

You play

We play

They play

Вопросительные предложения:

Do I play?

Does he / she / it play?

Do you play?

Do we play?

Do they play?

Отрицательные предложения:

I do not play

He / she / it does not play

You do not play

We do not play

They do not play

Английский глагол во временной форме Present Simple почти всегда совпадает со своей начальной, то есть указанной в словаре, формой без частицы to. Лишь в 3-ем лице единственного числа к ней нужно прибавить окончание -s:

I work – he works

Если глагол оканчивается на -s, -ss, -sh, -ch, -x, -o, то к нему прибавляется окончание -es:

I wish – he wishes

К глаголам на -у с предшествующей согласной тоже прибавляется окончание -es, а -у заменяется на -i-:

I try – he tries

Если же глагол оканчивается на -у с предшествующей гласной, то -у сохраняется и добавляется только окончание -s:

I play – he plays

Для того, чтобы построить вопросительное предложение, перед подлежащим нужно поставить вспомогательный глагол. Время Present Simple используется без него, поэтому в этом случае добавляется вспомогательный глагол do (или does в 3 л. ед. ч.):

Do you like rock? Тебе нравится рок?

Does he speak English? Он говорит по-английски?

В отрицательных предложениях тоже используется вспомогательный глагол do/does, но не перед подлежащим, а перед глаголом. После него прибавляется отрицательная частица not. Do/does и not часто сокращаются до don't и doesn't соответственно:

I do not like black coffee. Я не люблю черный кофе.

She doesn't smoke. Она не курит.

Случаи употребления Present Simple

- Регулярные, повторяющиеся действия:

I often go to the park. Я часто хожу в парк.

They play tennis every weekend. Каждые выходные они играют в теннис.

- Действие в настоящем в широком смысле слова:

Jim studies French. Джим изучает французский.

We live in Boston. Мы живем в Бостоне.

- Общеизвестные факты:

The Earth goes round the Sun. Земля вращается вокруг солнца.

The Volga is the longest river in Europe. Волга – самая длинная река в Европе.

- Перечисление последовательности действий:

We analyse what our clients may need, develop a new product, produce a sample, improve it and sell it. Мы анализируем, что может понадобиться нашим клиентам, разрабатываем новый продукт, изготавливаем образец, дорабатываем его и продаем.

- Некоторые случаи указания на будущее время (если имеется в виду некое расписание или план действий, а также в придаточных предложениях времени и условия):

The airplane takes off at 2.30 p.m. Самолет взлетает в 14:30.

When you see a big green house, turn left. Когда вы увидите большой зеленый дом, поверните налево.

Economics is divided into two major branches: macroeconomics and microeconomics.

The word “micro” means small, and microeconomics means economics in the small.

Microeconomics deals with the functioning of individual industries and the behaviour of individual economic decision-making units: single business firms and households. The choices of firms about what to produce, how much to charge and the choices of households about what to buy and how much of it to buy help to explain why the economy produces the things it does.

Another big question that microeconomics addresses is who gets the things that are produced. Why do we have poverty? Who is poor? Why do some jobs pay more than others? Why do teachers or plumbers or baseball pitchers get paid for what they do?

Think again about all the things you consume in a day, and then think back to that view out over a big city. Somebody decided to build those factories. Somebody decided to construct the roads, build the housing, produce the cars, knit the T-shirts, and smoke the bacon. Why? What is going on in all these buildings? It is easy to see that understanding individual micro decisions is very important to any understanding of your society.

The distribution of products and income among all these units is also analyzed by microeconomics. In this field of economics individuals are considered both as suppliers of labour and as consumers of goods. Firms are also studied as suppliers of products and as consumers of labour and capital. Microeconomics theory is used widely in many areas of applied economics. For example, it is used in industrial organization, labour economics, international trade, cost-benefit analyses and many other economic subfields.

The central components of microeconomics are demand, supply and market equilibrium. Demand refers to how individuals or households form their demands for different goods and services. Supply refers to how firms decide which and how many goods or services they will supply and what combination of factors of production they should employ in supplying them. Market equilibrium refers to how markets enable these supplies and demands to interact. There was a long period in the 19th and early in the 20th centuries when microeconomic questions dominated in economics.

Macroeconomics adds it all up and looks at the economy in the large. Macroeconomics deals with economic factors such as total national output and income, unemployment, level of price, and the rate of inflation. Instead of trying to understand what determines the output of a single firm or industry or the consumption patterns of a single household or group of households, we turn to the factors that determine national output, or national product. Macroeconomics turns from household income to national income.

While microeconomics focuses on individual product prices and relative prices, macroeconomics looks at the price level and the general rate of inflation. Microeconomics questions how many people will be hired (or fired) this year in the steel industry or in the high-tech firms around a definite region – what factors determine how much labour a firm or an industry will hire. Macroeconomics deals with aggregate employment and unemployment: how many jobs exist in the country, and how many people who are willing to work will not be able to find work.

Microeconomics, then, looks at the individual unit - the household, the firm, the industry. It sees and examines the “trees”. Macroeconomics looks at the whole, the aggregate. It sees and analyzes the “forest”.

Macroeconomic theory is largely concerned with what determines the size of gross national product (GNP), its stability and its relationship to unemployment and inflation. The GNP is the value of all goods and services produced by a country during a given period, even if production facilities are in another country. The key to prosperity in an economy is steady growth in national output. When growth in nation’s output exceeds its growth in population, this improves the well-being of the population of a country.

Forms of Organizing Business

There are three forms of organization of your business.

These forms are the sole proprietorship, the partnership and the corporation. Which of these forms of organization you choose depends on such questions as the size of your business, whether you are the only owner of your business or you have partners.

Sole Proprietorship. A sole proprietorship is the simplest organizational form. There is one owner of the business, who usually takes the title of President. So he or she can make any decision without consulting anyone. Such kinds of business are in the service industries, such as repairing shops, restaurants, etc.

Partnership. A partnership means that there is more than one owner to carry out business. And each partner declares his or her share of profit or loss on the personal income tax return.

There is a special type of partnership, called a limited partnership, where the limited partner is not involved in the management of the firm.

This form of organization is useful in such professional fields as law, insurance, and some industries, for example, oil prospecting. But partnership has some disadvantages. Partnership business fails when one of the partners loses his interest or disagrees with the other.

Corporation. A corporation is a more formal way of organization. It is established for the purpose of making profit and operated by managers. Corporation involves registration with a state department of commerce. There are some advantages, such as being able to attract financial resources, and to attract talented specialists and managers due to high salaries. In general, this form is economically better for business when its profit reaches a great sum of money.

Тема 2.2 Past Simple 2

Past Simple - простое прошедшее время

Время Past Simple используется для обозначения действия, которое произошло в определенное время в прошлом и время совершения которого уже истекло. Для уточнения момента совершения действия в прошлом при использовании времени Past Simple обычно используются такие слова, как five days ago (пять дней назад), last year (в прошлом году), yesterday (вчера), in 1980 (в 1980 году) и т.п.

Образование Past Simple

Утвердительные предложения:

I played

He / she / it played

You played

We played

They played

Вопросительные предложения:

Did I play?

Did he / she / it play?

Did you play?

Did we play?

Did they play?

Отрицательные предложения:

I did not play

He / she / it did not play

You did not play

We did not play

They did not play

Для того, чтобы поставить английский глагол во время Past Simple, нужно использовать его «вторую форму». Для большинства глаголов она образуется прибавлением окончания -ed:

examine – examined, enjoy – enjoyed, close – closed

Однако есть также достаточно большая группа неправильных английских глаголов, которые образуют форму прошедшего времени не по общим правилам, для них форму прошедшего времени нужно просто запомнить.

We saw your dog two blocks from here.

Мы видели вашу собаку в двух кварталах отсюда.

В вопросительном предложении перед подлежащим нужно использовать вспомогательный глагол do в прошедшем времени – did, а после подлежащего поставить основной, значимый глагол в начальной форме:

Did you wash your hands? Ты помыл руки?

Did they sign the contract? Они подписали контракт?

В отрицательных предложениях перед глаголом нужно поставить вспомогательный глагол did и отрицательную частицу not:

We did not find our car. Мы не нашли свою машину.

I did not understand this question. Я не понял этот вопрос.

Случаи употребления Past Simple:

- Указание на простое действие в прошлом:

I saw Jeremy in the bank. Я видел Джереми в банке.

- Регулярные, повторяющиеся действия в прошлом:

The old man often visited me. Старик часто меня навещал.

I noticed this charming shop girl each time I went to buy something.

Я замечал эту очаровательную продавщицу каждый раз, когда шел за покупками.

- Перечисление последовательности действий в прошлом:

I heard a strange sound, looked back, and saw a huge cat sitting on the table.

Я услышал странный звук, обернулся и увидел здоровенного кота, сидящего на столе.

The Sole Proprietor

Many businesses are sole proprietorships, firms owned and operated by a single person. When a person decides to open an independent business, that person is then entirely responsible for its success or failure. Any profits go to the owner; any losses are his other responsibility as well.

One of the advantages of a sole proprietorship is that an owner can make decisions without consulting anyone. And individual proprietor, by law, pays fewer taxes than does a corporation. However, there are disadvantages to this form of business organization. A sole proprietorship ends with the incapacity or death of the owner.

The sole proprietorship is well adapted to many kinds of small businesses.

Some economic benefits of small businesses are:

- ☐ a small business is often the starting point for developing a new product or service;

The Business Partnership

When a proprietor wants to expand a business, one way to do so is to form a partnership, a business formed for profit by two or more co-owners. The rights and duties of a partnership are regulated by laws of the state where it is formed and by a legal agreement made by the co-owners. Usually an agreement specifies the amount of money, each is investing and duties each partner assumes. A partnership agreement also may provide for a «silent partner» who does not take part in the management, but who invests money in the business.

The partnership has the advantage of pooling managerial talent. One partner may be qualified in production, another in marketing. The partnership has a favourable tax position when compared with the corporation. Federal taxes are paid by individual partners on their share of earnings, beyond that the business is not taxed.

A major disadvantage of the partnership is that each member is liable for all debts of the partnership; the act of any partner is legally binding upon the others. For example, if one partner takes a large sum of money from the business and wastes it, the others must pay the debt. Partnership has another disadvantage: decision-making is shared. If partners have serious disagreements, the business is failed. Nevertheless, the partnership remains a vital part of the whole business economy.

Large Corporations

Although there are many small- and medium-size businesses, bigger corporations are needed to perform certain services in the vast state economy.

Large corporations can supply goods and services to a greater number of people than the small businesses. They serve consumers across the country and across the world. Corporate products cost less because of the large volume.

Large corporations also have great sum of money to research, develop and produce new goods. The scientific «know-how», innovation and technical capability permit them to maintain the competitiveness and productivity.

A corporation is a specific legal form of organization of persons and resources which is established for the purpose of conducting business and making profits.

When people and resources are brought together to form a corporation, the result – in the eyes of the law – is a person. The corporation may own property, sue or be sued in court and make contracts. For this reason, the corporation is an ideal means for the conduct of business by many smaller enterprises as well as larger ones.

The corporate form of business has some advantages and disadvantages. First, large corporations can hire talented managers and specialist to conduct the business. Second, the owners of shares have limited liability; they are not responsible for corporate debts. Third, the corporation is not damaged by the death or disinterest of a particular person.

One disadvantage is taxation. As a separate legal unit, the corporation must pay taxes. Then when the corporation pays profits to individuals in the form of dividends, the individuals are taxed again on these dividends. This is known as double taxation.

Another disadvantage is that the ownership becomes separated from management. Sometimes managers act more in their own interests than those of stock holders.

When people speak of business cycles, they think of things like “prosperity” and “depression”. “Prosperity” is ordinary used to describe an extended period of high employment, an improved standard of living and stable prices.

By contrast, “depression” refers to an extended period of general underemployment of economic resources. Factories are idle, millions of workers are unable to find jobs, and the rate of business failure is high. The worst depression in American history, now known as the Great Depression, lasted from 1930 to 1940. There were, for example, 13 million people, about one of every four workers, unemployed in 1933. That same year businesses failed at a record rate, and number of people lost their savings because more than 4,000 privately owned banks closed permanently.

More common, however, are much shorter and less dramatic changes in business activity. These changes can be described in a number of different ways, but for convenience they are called the periods of boom, contraction, recession and expansion. The way to smooth out economic fluctuations was not found yet.

Boom

At the peak of the business cycle of the economy is booming. Business is producing at or near capacity, and those looking for work can generally find jobs. During peak times, business investment and consumer spending are at very high levels. But because the economy is at or near full employment and the demand for goods and services is increasing, prices are also increasing. This sets the stage for the next phase of the business cycle.

Contraction

For any number of reasons, consumers and businesses begin to reduce their spending levels. Businesses may lay off workers, reduce their purchases of raw materials and reduce production because they have built up excess inventories. Some businesses may decide to continue to use old factories and equipment rather than investing in new machines and buildings. Some businesses and consumers will even reduce spending because economists predict that business will be slowing down in the next few months. Whatever the reason, reductions in business and consumer spending mark the beginning of a contraction in the business cycle.

Recession

With factories operating at less than capacity and unemployment at very high levels, total output of goods and services enters a long-term decline. This is the bottom phase of the business cycle, or as economists describe it, the period of recession.

Times are hard during recession. Unemployment is very high, jobs are difficult to find and many businesses fail. A very severe and long-lasting recession is called a “depression”.

Expansion

After a period of recession the economy eventually begins to recover, entering the expansion phase of the business cycle. During a period of expansion the conditions are about to improve, business begins to expand its activities. Unemployment declines as additional workers are hired. This, in turn, leads to higher levels of consumer spending and still further expansion of employment, output and consumption.

The central problem of economics is to determine the most efficient ways to allocate the factors of production (natural resources, human resources and capital) and solve the problem of scarcity created by society's unlimited wants and limited resources. In doing so, every society must provide answers to the same three questions:

- What goods and services are to be produced and in what quantities are they to be produced?
- How are those goods and services to be produced?
- Who will receive and consume them?

Societies and nations have created different economic systems to provide answers to these fundamental questions.

An economic system is the way in which a country uses its available resources (land, workers, natural resources, machinery, etc.) to satisfy the demands of its population for goods and services. The more goods and services that can be produced from these limited resources the higher the standard of living of the population.

If we look at the different political and social structures which exist in the world today, and the way in which these systems have developed over the years, we can say that people use a very great varieties of economic systems. In fact, it is possible to group these different economic structures into four broad categories:

- traditional economy which looks to customs and traditions
- planned or command economy which rely upon governments to provide the answers
- market economy in which market prices answer most of What, How and Who questions.
- mixed economy, which is a mixture of command and market economies.

The traditional economy. The answers to the What, How and Who questions are decided by traditions in these economies. Traditional economy systems are usually found in the more remote areas of the world. Such systems may characterize isolated tribes or groups or even whole economies. Typically, in a traditional economy most of the people live in rural areas and their main activities are agriculture, fishing or hunting. The goods and services in such a system are those that have been produced for many years or even generations in a way they have always been produced. In short, the division of land among the families in the village or tribe, the methods and times of planting and harvesting, the selection of crops, and the way in which the product is distributed among the different groups are all determined by very slowly changing traditions.

The basic economic problems do not arise as problems to be discussed and argued about. They have all been decided long ago. Who gets what is produced in such an economy? Since there is little produced, there is little to be distributed. Most individuals live very poor, they have enough to sustain them but not more than that. In some years, when the harvest is poor, some are not able to survive and either leave the society or die. In better years, when the harvest is high there may be more than enough to survive. When such a surplus exists, it is distributed traditionally. The most part of the product may go to a tribal chief or large landowner, while the remains are distributed according to customs.

Planned economy is sometimes called “command economy” because the state plans and controls the use of resources (such as labour and factories) that are used to produce goods and services as a state owns factories, land and natural resources. Planned economy is an economy with a large amount of central planning and direction, when the government takes all the decisions. There might be no private property at all. For example, in the former Soviet Union state planners decided what was to be produced and in what quantities. They passed orders down to factories, allocating raw materials, workers, and other factors of production to them. Factories were then told how much they should produce with these resources and where they should be sent. The workers are told where to work and what work to perform.

Planning of this kind is very difficult, very complicated to do, and the result is that there is no society, which is completely a command economy. The actual system varies from state to state, but command or planned economies have a number of common features. In such a system the state decides what the nation is to produce. It usually plans five years ahead. The planners set the plan and each industry and factory is set a production target.

A planned economy is simple to understand but not simple to operate. It does, however, have a number of advantages and disadvantages.

Advantages:

- Everyone in society receives enough goods and services to enjoy a basic standard of living.
- There should be work for everybody.
- The state can use its control of the economy. It can ensure that everyone receives a good education and proper health care.
- The needs of the population are met, but there is little production of luxury goods for the wealthy.

FREE MARKET ECONOMY

VOCABULARY

to interfere – вмешиваться

private enterprise – частное предпринимательство

private ownership – частная собственность means of production – средства производства

employer – работодатель

favoured - привлекательны profitable goods – прибыльный товар

tax –налог

to compete - конкурировать boom – бум; быстрый подъём (деловой активности)

recession – спад

In a true market economy the government plays no role in the management of the economy, the government does not interfere in it. The system is based on private enterprise with private ownership of the means of production. Although markets exist in traditional and command economies, all major means of production (companies, farms, factories, etc) are usually publicly owned. That is, they are owned by groups of people or by the government. In a market economy the means of production are owned by private individuals. There is no government control over land, capital and labour. No government ministry decides how many shirts or shoes to manufacture, or what style or colours. Business produce goods to make a profit.

Workers are paid wages by employers according how skilled they are and how many firms wish to employ them. They spend their wages on the products and services they need. Consumers are willing to spend more on products and services, which are favoured. Firms make more of the more profitable goods – those demanded by consumers. They make fewer of the less profitable goods – those least demanded by the consumers. This leads to direct competition between different firms making and selling these products, and that competition is one of the basic reasons why there are generally so many different styles, fabrics and brands of clothing for consumers to choose from in market economies.

Market economies are directed by prices. As the price of an item rises, sellers are encouraged to increase production, and consumers are discouraged from purchasing them. When the price falls, the opposite is true. In this way prices send out “signals” to buyers and sellers, and are influenced by the demand for and supply of the goods.

Thus, we can see that in a market economy consumers decide what is to be produced.

There are certain advantages and disadvantages of a free market economy.

Advantages:

- Consumers are free to choose what they want to buy.
- Workers are encouraged to work hard as they can keep most of their income because of low taxes.
- Business compete with each other and this could keep prices low.

Disadvantages:

- There are no government-provided goods or services such as health or education, available for everybody.
- As there is no government control over the economy there could be many uncontrolled booms and recessions in the economy.
- Businesses might be encouraged to create monopolies in order to increase prices. Consumers will have limited choice.

In fact, there is no country in the world with a completely free market economy. In all countries governments are involved in making important economic decisions. The United States is the country with an economy most like a free market system. But even there, the USA government has a lot of control over the economy.

Ex. 19. Translate into Russian. (“That / Those”)

1. These rates are higher than those in most Western European countries.
2. The selling cost of the larger firm will be much greater than those of the smaller firm.
3. Unofficial strikes are those which do not have full support of the trade union.
4. The rate of savings in rich countries is much higher than that in poor country.
5. Although there are more male births than female births, the number of females in the total population exceeds that of males.
6. The aims of monetary policy are the same as those of economic policy in general.
7. That he refused to help his partner is very strange.

MIXED ECONOMY

VOCABULARY

market forces – рыночные силы

intermediate system – промежуточная система at one extreme... at the other extreme – на одном полюсе... на другом a public sector – государственный сектор government- or state-owned organizations – государственные учреждения to charge the consumers – назначать цену потребителю taxpayer – налогоплательщик in response to – в ответ на to avoid – избегать

to interact – взаимодействовать defence – оборона water supply – водоснабжение

There are no “pure” market economies in the world today. Both market forces and government participation have been playing a certain role in the economy of a country. This mixture of market forces and government participation has led to development of an intermediate system, known as mixed economy.

A mixed economy contains elements of both market and command economies. At one extreme we have a public sector (like the command economy) made up of government- or state-owned and controlled businesses and organizations. The government makes decisions about what to produce and how much to charge the consumers. Some goods and services are provided free of charge to the consumers – such as state health and education services. The money for these comes not from the users but from the taxpayers. At the other extreme we have a private sector (like the free market economy) made up of businesses not owned by the government. These businesses will make their own decisions about what to produce, how it should be produced and what price should be charged for it. Even so, there likely to be some government controls over these decisions. Between these two extremes lies a mixed economy. In mixed economies some resources are controlled by the government while the others are used in response to the demands of consumers.

Technically, all the economies of the world are mixed. Some countries are nearer to command economies, while others are closer to free market economies.

The aim of mixed economies is to avoid the disadvantages of both systems while enjoying the benefits that they both offer. So, in a mixed economy the government and the private sector interact in solving economic problems.

What are the most common areas of government ownership?

In many countries the government controls the following important industries or organisations:

health	defence	water supply
education	public transport	electricity supply

The United Kingdom is a country with mixed economy. Some services are provided by the state (for example, health care and defence), while a range of privately owned businesses offer other goods and services.

It is common knowledge that money rules the world. Why does it and why do people need money – these are questions everyone would like to answer.

What is money? Money is anything that is generally accepted by people for the things they sell or the work they do. Money is the medium through which people exchange goods and services. Money makes the trading process simpler and more efficient.

Almost every society now has a money economy based on coins and paper notes of one kind or another. However, this has not always been true. In primitive societies a system of barter was used. In barter economy there is no medium of exchange. Goods are traded directly or swapped for other goods. Trading is very expensive in barter economy. People must spend a lot of time and effort to find others with whom they can make mutually satisfactory swaps. If you wanted, for instance, a car, you would have to find a car owner willing to sell a car. Suppose the car owner wanted a scooter in exchange for the car and you didn't have the scooter. You would then have to find something that a scooter owner wanted and swap it for the scooter in order to give it to the car owner, a barter economy is wasteful.

People needed a more practical system of exchange. Before paper and coins were introduced as permanent forms of paying, people used a variety of other objects to serve as money for selling goods. Examples of early forms of money are the following: rice, dog teeth, grains, shells, salt, tobacco. However, today money consists mainly of paper bills, coins made of various metals, and checking account deposits.

Functions of money. Money, in general, performs three functions. The first, and the most important is a medium of exchange. A medium of exchange, or a transactions medium, is anything generally acceptable as a means of payment in the exchange of goods and services, in repaying debts. Bank deposits are also a medium of exchange because they are generally accepted as payment.

The second function of money is to serve as a unit of account. The unit of account is the unit in which people state the price of goods and services in terms of money. Historically societies choose a single item to serve as a unit of account, say, a kilogram of wheat. In this way, each good could be priced at so many kilograms of wheat per unit. In modern times, paper money is the unit of account. For example, the dollar is the unit of account in the United States.

Knowing that a pound of apples costs one dollar and a pound of peaches costs two dollars enables us to compare their value. Thus, money becomes a standard of value. Normally, the same item serves as the unit of account and the medium of exchange: the dollar in the United States, the pound sterling in Great Britain, the euro in many European countries, the yen in Japan, the rouble in Russia and Belarus. The money in use in a country is called currency.

The third function of money is a store of value. Money is a store of value because it can be used to make purchases in the future, it is a reservoir of future purchasing power. Money is both a temporary and a permanent store of purchasing power. For example, an individual earns $700 a week but plans to spend $560 on goods and services and save $140 every week. Usually this individual will not spend the entire $560 on a day. Instead, he may spend $90 on a day and hold $470 in the form of money to be spent over the course of the week. This $470 held in money is a temporary store of purchasing power.

Money can also serve as a permanent store of purchasing power. People hold money to carry out their future transactions. The wealth of individuals is their accumulated savings. Money is one form in which people may keep their wealth. Gold, jewels, real estate, paintings, stock and bonds are other forms. Of course, when wealth is held in money, in the future it will not need to be exchanged to buy goods and services. The ability of money to serve as a store of value depends on its capacity to retain its purchasing power.

These three functions of money – medium of exchange, unit of account and store of value – can only be fulfilled if there is great confidence in its stability of value. Safeguarding monetary stability is the primary task of the central banks all over the world. Moreover, the central bank has the function of regulating the money supply in order to guarantee a smooth functioning of the monetary system.

2. Read the text and do the exercises

For many people, money is equal to bills and coins. However, even though this is not wrong, it is only one part of the equation. Generally speaking, money is a set of assets that are commonly used and accepted as payment for goods and services in an economy. This suggests that anything can be considered money, as long as it fulfills certain criteria (i.e., the functions of money).

To really understand what money is, we must therefore look at the relevant functions it performs within the economy. To keep things simple, we will focus on the three most important ones here: money as a medium of exchange, a store of value, and a unit of account.

1. Medium of exchange

Money can be used in exchange for goods and services. This reduces transaction costs by a huge margin because people no longer need to barter. In other words, you can just walk into a store and buy a pair of jeans (or whatever you need) in exchange for your money. This only works as long as the seller is confident, that he will be able to use the currency he receives to buy goods or services of equal value later on.

2. Store of value

Money can serve as a store of value. That means, it can be used to transfer buying power into the future. If you sell your car, for instance, you can keep the money for a while and use it to buy a new car later in the future. For that reason, money needs to be durable and must not lose its value over time.

Please note that this may not be perfectly accurate in reality, as money can actually lose some of its value due to inflation. However, we consider this effect negligible for now (but we will cover it later).

3. Unit of account

Money is also a measure of economic value. Every good you can buy in a shopping center has a price tag on it. Thanks to that we can easily compare the value of completely different goods. To give an example, you may want to buy some ice cream for 2$ and a shirt for 20$. By comparing the prices you know that the ice cream is worth about 1/10 of a shirt. Using money as a unit of account is very convenient because it allows us to compare virtually everything.

3. Complete the summary with the following words and phrases: money, assets, a unit of account, a medium of exchange, a store of value.

Money is a set of 1 _____ that are generally used and accepted as 2 _____ for goods and services in an economy. Apart from its function as a medium of exchange, money also serves as 3 _____ and 4 _____. Everything that fulfills these three functions can be considered 5_.

4. Choose the correct alternative.

1. What are the three basic functions of money?

A a medium of exchange

B a barter

C a store of value

D a unit of account

2. _____ is anything that people will accept as payment for goods and services.

A money

B inflation

C value

3. What does function 'a medium of exchange' mean?

A Money that is used for measuring that relative worth of a wide variety of goods, services, and resources.

B Money that enables people to transfer purchasing power from the present to the future. An asset set aside for future use.

C Money which is usable for buying and selling goods and services.

4. Money as a 'unit of account' means:

A Money that is used for measuring that relative worth of a wide variety of goods, services, and resources.

B Money that enables people to transfer purchasing power from the present to the future. An asset set aside for future use.

C Money which is usable for buying and selling goods and services.

5. What does money as 'a store of value' mean?

A Money that is used for measuring that relative worth of a wide variety of goods, services, and resources.

B Money that enables people to transfer purchasing power from the present to the future. An asset set aside for future use.

C Money which is usable for buying and selling goods and services.

Тема 4.4. Банки и финансы

A bank is a financial company that deals with money, securities and precious metals. If you need a certain amount of money, you can come to the bank and apply for a cash loan. After the bank approves your application, a contract is concluded between the client and the bank in which all conditions are stipulated. Loans are short-term or long-term, and are issued at a certain percentage. The client is given a schedule, according to which he must pay a fixed amount of money every month. This amount includes the loan itself, and the interest for using money. The client can also repay the loan in full with a one-time payment, thereby reducing the interest rate. Banks give their customers plastic cards, from which ATMs can always and everywhere withdraw the required amount. Plastic cards can also pay for any purchases or services. Banks can provide money not only to individuals, but also to huge companies, industries.

Also people in banks can store their savings. The bank not only protects other people's money, but also pays interest to its depositors for the right to use this money. When the depositor needs to withdraw the entire amount from his account, he comes to the bank and receives the money deposited.

For any bank it is very important to earn an excellent reputation and try to keep it. The quality of the bank's work will depend on the number of depositors and other customers wishing to avail themselves of banking services.

Without banks, any economy can not develop. Investors will remain without money, and will not be able to implement their projects. Such industries as engineering, agriculture, chemical industry, mining and forestry, will not be able to successfully develop and progress.

Banks TEXT

Banks are organizations that carry out the business of banking, taking deposits and then using those deposits to make loans. In essence, a bank aims to make a profit by playing depositors a lower rate of interest than the rate the bank charges borrowers. In accounting terms, deposits are considered liabilities, and loans are considered assets.

Banks in many countries are supervised by a central bank, such as the Bank of England in the United Kingdom, the Bundesbank in Germany, the Federal Reserve System in the United States and Central Bank in Russia.

There are many different types of bank, and the banking structure varies from one country to another. Banks can fall into the following categories:

Retail banks are often referred to as commercial banks. In addition to conventional banking services, such as the provision of chequing accounts, they deal in foreign exchange, issue credit cards, provide investment and tax advice, and sell financial products such as insurance. In the UK the biggest retail banks are Barclays Bank, National Westminster Bank, Midland Bank, Abbey National Bank and Lloyds Bank.

Merchant or investment banks act as intermediaries between investors and private or public concerns seeking medium to long-term funds, often acting as underwriters for an issue of shares. Increasingly they have played a fundamental role in advising on mergers and acquisitions, and on management buy-outs. In the UK, some of the largest established and best-known merchant banks are still privately owned.

Building societies were set up in the UK to take deposits in order to provide long-term loans to homebuyers. They are owned by their members (those who have deposits money with or borrowed money from them).

Saving Banks were set up with the aim of attracting small savers. They resemble retail banks in the services they provide.

Credit Unions are the equivalents of saving banks, and are run as a cooperative nonprofit-making organization. Credit Unions are widespread in the United States. France's biggest bank, Credit Agricole, is essentially a federation of more than 3,000 credit unions.

Universal banks are those, such as Germany's Deutsche Bank, Dresdner Bank, and Commerzbank, which do everything that the above types of banks do.

As you are reading this text you are probably sitting at the desk. Most desks are still made of wood. How many different types of businesses might have been involved in converting the wood into a finished desk ready to be sold to a final consumer? What stages of production has the wood passed through to arrive at the finished desk?

These are the stages involved in making and selling a wooden desk:

stage	business involved
primary	woodcutter
secondary	furniture maker
tertiary	retailer

You will notice that there are three main stages between the cutting down of the timber and the sale of the completed desk. These stages are typical of nearly all production and they are called the levels of business activity.

Stage 1 is called the primary sector of production. This sector involves agriculture, and the extraction of raw materials from the earth, such as oil and copper ore.

Stage 2 is called the secondary sector of production. This sector involves manufacturing industry, in which raw materials are turned into finished products. Activities in the secondary sector of industry include building and construction, aircraft making, computer assembly and baking.

Stage 3 is called the tertiary sector of production. This sector involves the commercial services that help industry produce and distribute goods to the final consumers. Activities in the tertiary sector of industry include transport, finance, banking, insurance, as well as education, health care, leisure, tourism, hotels and so on.

Which sector of industry is most important in your country? This depends on what is meant by “important”. Usually the three sectors of industry are compared by either:

- the number of workers employed in each sector or

- the value of output of goods and services.

When these comparisons are made, some interesting differences often arise between countries. In some countries, primary industries such as farming and fishing employ many more people than manufacturing or service industry. These tend to be countries – often called developing countries – where manufacturing industry has only recently been established. As most people still live in the country area with low incomes, there is little demand for services such as transport, hotels and insurance. The levels of both employment and output in the primary sector in these countries are likely to be higher than the other two sectors.

In countries which started up manufacturing many years ago, the secondary and tertiary sectors are likely to employ many more workers than the primary sector. The level of output in the primary sector is often small compared to the other two sectors. In very wealthy countries, it is now common to find that many manufactured goods are bought in from other nations. Most of the workers will be employed in the service sector. The output of the tertiary sector is often higher than the other two sectors combined. These are often called the most developing countries.

In the UK, there has been a decline in manufacturing industry – or the secondary sector – for over 30 years. Over 60 per cent of all workers are now employed in the tertiary sector of industry. This has been a major change in the structure of industry. Many workers who lost jobs as factories closed have found it difficult to get work in the service industries. The decline in the manufacturing or secondary sector of industry is called DE-INDUSTRIALISATION.

How are prices determined in the free market?

The price is determined by the interaction of demand for and supply of the product. If there are many competitors in a market, this will mean that businesses have to charge the market price for their products.

If a farmer produced rice, he would take the rice to market and sell it for the price that rice was selling for in that market. The farmer could not charge a much higher price because no one would buy his rice - consumers would buy from other farmers who were charging the lower market price.

To understand how price is arrived at, demand and supply will be looked at separately.

What is meant by demand?

The first thing to understand is that demand is not the same thing as desire, or need, or want. Demand is not just what people want to buy, they must also have money to be able to purchase the product. Only when desire is supported by the ability and willingness to pay the price it becomes an effective demand and has an influence in the market.

The demand for a product depends on how much is charged for the product. If the price increases, normally fewer will be bought and if the price goes down, more will be demanded.

Demand is a consumer's willingness and ability to buy a product or service at any given price, at a particular time and place. The law of demand describes the relationship between the prices of a good or service and the quantity consumers will buy. This means that all else remaining equal, more goods and services will be sold at a lower price than at a higher price.

Let's see the law of demand from the point of ice cream selling.

The first ice-cream consumed at the baseball game is great; the second is good; the third one is fair; the fourth one was "too much"; and the fifth one made you sick. Clearly we would not like to pay as much to feel sick (the fifth ice-cream) as we would pay to feel great (the first ice-cream). So, sooner or later, we reach the point where enjoyment decreases with every bite no matter how low is the cost. What is true of ice-cream applies to almost everything we consume. After a certain point is reached, the satisfaction from a good or service will begin to diminish. Economists describe this effect as diminishing marginal utility. "Utility" refers to the usefulness of something.

Diminishing marginal utility helps to explain why lower prices are needed to increase the quantity demanded. Since your desire for a second ice-cream is less than it was for the first, you are not likely to buy more than one, except for the lower price. So, a decrease in demand will result in decrease of a market price. And on the contrary, an increase in demand will result in an increase in the market price.

To summarize: the law of demand states that in general, other things remaining equal, the lower the price of a good – the greater the quantity of that good buyers are willing and able to buy over a given period. Conversely, the higher the price of a good – the less the quantity of that good buyers will buy. This law is relevant to all goods and services.

Changes in Demand. What are some of the factors that would cause the demand for ice-cream, or any other product, to increase or to decrease ?

They are the following:

1. Changes in consumer income.

If consumer's income falls, there will be less demand for many products. When consumers have less money to spend, they will reduce their demand for products.

Changes in the prices of substitutes.

These are bought and used in place of another product. Assuming potatoes and macaroni foods are substitute products. If the price of macaroni foods rises then more potatoes will be bought and demand for macaroni foods will fall.

3. Changes in the prices of complements.

These are products that are often bought and consumed together. Assuming coffee and milk are complements; if the price of coffee rises, then less coffee will be bought and therefore will be less demand for milk.

4. Changes in consumer's tastes or fashion.

If a product becomes more popular, demand will increase.

5. Changes in advertising.

If there has been a successful advertising campaign, for example for a particular brand of sports shoes, the demand will increase.

The demand for particular goods can be influenced by weather, demographic trend, taxes and other factors.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. Assume you sell TVs. According to the concept of diminishing marginal utility, people with one TV set would be less eager to purchase or rent a second or third set. How would you overcome this sales resistance?
2. As a consumer, you make decisions every day about how to spend your limited incomes. What motivates your choices? Why do you choose to buy another pair of jeans, and what do you sacrifice by doing so?
3. Do you think it is logical that “consumer responds to lower prices by buying more”? Think of an example when consumer believes that prices would go even lower and doesn’t react immediately in the expected way.

equilibrium price and quantity – сбалансированные цена и предложение

to equal – равнятьсяся

to affect – влиять

It takes two parties to make a sale: buyers and sellers.

The law of supply describes a relationship between the price of a good or service and how much sellers will offer for sale at a specified time. This means that, other things remaining equal, at high prices businesses will naturally want to produce and sell more. At lower prices less will be produced and supplied.

Why does the quantity of a product supplied change if its price rises or falls? The answer is that producers supply things to make a profit. The higher price - the greater the incentive to produce and sell the product.

Changes in Supply. A change in supply is a change in the relationship between the price of a good and the quantity supplied in response to the changes in economic conditions. The changes that can affect the quantities supplied are as follows:

1. Changes in the cost of production

If it costs sellers less to produce their products, they will be able to offer more of them for sale and supply will increase. An increase in production costs will have the opposite effect – supply will decrease.

2. Changes in the technology available to produce the good.

Improvements in technology tend to lower the cost of production, thus increasing the output.

3. Expectations about future prices.

If producers expect prices to increase in the future, they may increase their production now to be in position to profit later. Similarly, if prices are expected to decrease in the future, producers may reduce production, and supply will fall.

4. Other profit opportunities.

Most producers can make more than one product. If the price of a product they are not producing (but could if they choose to) increases, many producers will shift their output to that product. If supply increases, the market price will usually decrease and sales will increase. If supply falls, the market price will usually increase and sales will fall. When the product is scarce, the price will usually increase. When the product is in abundant supply, the price will usually fall.

Market Equilibrium. Now we see that buyers and sellers are in conflict: buyers will only purchase more at lower prices, while sellers will only sell more at higher prices. Can they reach an agreement? Yes. Their agreement is called the equilibrium (or market) price and quantity. It is the point at which the quantity demanded exactly equals the quantity supplied in a market. Shifts in demand or supply will affect market price. When everything else remains equal, an increase in demand will result in an increase in the market price, and sales will increase. If demand falls then the market price will fall and sales will fall. Similarly, an increase in supply will result in a decrease in the market price, and sales will increase. If supply falls, the market price will usually increase and sales will fall.

A shortage exists in a market if the quantity demanded exceeds the quantity supplied of a good over a given period. A surplus exists in a market if the quantity supplied exceeds the quantity demanded of a good over a given period.

At the market equilibrium price of a good, there can be neither surpluses, nor shortages in the market. It means that the market is cleared (the price equates the quantity supplied and quantity demanded).

INFLATION.

An inflationary development is characterized by rising prices within a certain period of time. The rising prices is a consequence of an uneven development in the quantity of goods on offer and the quantity of money available, which it self determines the demand and is the inflation rate.

The causes of inflation are generally complex and can arise either from the goods or from the monetary side.

The consequences of inflation are extremely damaging for the economy. Inflation becomes stagflation when economic growth decreases or comes to a halt, but inflation continues to rise. If the state does not take measures to combat stagflation, this leads to deflation.

BOOKKEEPERS.

Bookkeepers deal in taxes, cash flow, which include cash receipts and cash disbursements, sales, purchases and different business transactions of the company. Bookkeepers first record all the appropriate figures – in the books of original entry, or Journals. At the end of a period usually a month- the totals of each book of original entry are posted into the proper page of the Ledger. The ledger shows all the expenditures and all the earnings of the company. On the basis of all the totals of each account in the Ledger, the bookkeeper prepares a Trial Balance. Trial balances are usually drawn up every quarter. The accountant's responsibility is to analyse and interpret the data in the Ledger and the Trial Balance.

The accountant is to determine the ways in which the business may grow in the future. No expansion or reorganization is planned without the help of the accountant. New products and advertising campaigns are also prepared with the help of the accountant. The work of accountants is rather sophisticated. Many accountants have special certificates after they pass examinations in Institute of Accountants. Certified accountants in England are called chartered accountants. In the U.S.A. the certified accountants are called certified public accountants. But it is not necessary to have a certificate to practice accounting. Junior employees in large companies, for example, often practice accounting and then take the

Тема 6.4. Пассивный залог

Глаголы в английском языке употребляются в активной форме залога — «the Active Voice» и в пассивной (страдательной) — «the Passive Voice». В активном залоге субъект выполняет действие, указанное глаголом, а в пассивном — на субъект действует сам глагол. She wrote a book (Active) – A book was written by her (Passive).

Что такое пассивный залог?

Пассивный залог широко употребляется как в устном так и в письменном современном английском. Зачастую пассивные конструкции используются, когда нет необходимости называть исполнителя какого-либо действия, а также, если нет разницы в том, кто именно это действие выполняет — важен лишь результат.

Страдательный залог используется, чтобы показать интерес к объекту, который испытывает действие, а не к объекту, который его выполняет.

The book was written last Monday. – Книга была написана в прошлый понедельник.

В этом предложении подлежащее «the book» испытывает на себе действие субъекта, то есть не сама книга себя написала, а была кем-то написана. При этом, скорее всего, известно, кто ее написал, но здесь важен сам факт совершения действия (книгу написали, и она готова), а не исполнитель. Поэтому предложение и употреблено в пассивном залоге.

Когда необходимо указать исполнителя действия в пассивном залоге, то добавляем предлог «by»:

The book was written by me. – Эта книга была написана мной.

Образование пассивного залога в разных временах

Пассивный залог образуется с помощью вспомогательного глагола «be» и формы Past Participle (смыслового глагола в 3 форме) и только переходные глаголы (обозначают действие, которое по своему смыслу переходит на некий предмет) могут образовывать формы пассивного залога.

Образование пассивного залога

Время	Формула	Пример
Present Simple	is/am/are + Ved (V3)	Mails are sent every day. – Посылки отправляют каждый день.
Past Simple	was/were + Ved (V3)	Mails were sent yesterday. – Посылки отправили вчера.

Future Simple	will/shall + be + Ved(V3)	Mails will be sent tomorrow. – Посылки отправят завтра.
Present Continuous	is/am/are + being + Ved (V3)	Mails are being sent now. – Посылки отправляют сейчас.
Past Continuous	was/were + being + Ved (V3)	Mails were being sent at 5 yesterday. – Посылки вчера отправляли в 5 часов.
Future Continuous	—	—
Present Perfect	has/have + been + Ved (V3)	Letters have been already sent. – Письма уже отправили.
Past Perfect	had + been + Ved (V3)	Letters had been sent before he phoned. – Письма отправили до того, как он позвонил.
Future Perfect	will/shall + have/has + been + Ved (V3)	Letters will have been sent by 5 tomorrow. – Письма отправят завтра до 5 часов.
Perfect Continuous	—	—

Attention: Perfect Continuous вообще не используется в страдательном залоге. А время Continuous не имеет будущего отрезка.

Кроме этого, еще можно образовывать пассивные предложения с двумя объектами. Так активное предложение в пассивной форме залога может выглядеть следующим образом:

Active Voice:

Linda gave an apple to me.

Passive Voice:

An apple was given to me by Linda or
I was given an apple by Linda.

Один из двух объектов становится субъектом, а другой остается объектом. Какой объект превратится в субъект зависит от того, на чем вы сосредоточитесь.

Отрицательные и вопросительные формы глагола в пассивном залоге

Отрицательная форма глагола образуется с помощью частицы «not», которая следует за вспомогательным глаголом (если вспомогательных глаголов несколько, то «not» ставится после первого):

The cat was not fed by him yesterday. – Кот не был накормлен им вчера.

The cat was not often left hungry. – Кота не часто оставляли голодным.

Ничего сложного и в вопросительной форме. Для образования такой в пассивном залоге первый вспомогательный глагол ставится перед подлежащим:

Are you often invited to the circus? – Тебя часто приглашают в цирк?

Has the book been written by her? – Книга была написана ею?

Workers are either weekly or hourly paid and they get set wages.

Many companies often operate a bonus system for monthly and weekly-paid staff. The bonus is usually paid against certain work done.

The amount of the bonus payment is worked out from the employees job cards.

Hourly-paid staff are usually on the clock. Under this system each worker has a clock number and a clock card. He records his hours of work on the clock card by inserting it into what is literally a clock.

A device in the clock stamps the card with the time. At the end of each week the clock cards are collected by the timekeepers. The cards are checked and then passed on to the Wages Office. In the Wages Office the wages and overtime are calculated.

When monthly or weekly paid staff work overtime they are paid overtime.

Employees are sometimes paid in cash or by cheque, but direct payments into the employee's bank accounts are becoming more and more popular.

As a rule employees get pay advices for the paid period.

The advice states the earnings, all the deductions and the total amount payable. The deductions usually include National Health Insurance contributions.

Taxes are sometimes referred to as direct or indirect. The meaning of these terms can vary in different contexts, which can sometimes lead to confusion. In economics, direct taxes refer to those taxes that are collected from the people or organizations on whom they are imposed. For example, income taxes are collected from the person who earns the income. By contrast, indirect taxes are collected from someone other than the person responsible for paying the taxes.

From whom a tax is collected is a matter of law. However, who pays the tax is determined by the market place and is found by comparing the price of the good (including tax) after the tax is imposed to the price of the good before the tax was imposed. For example, suppose the price of gas in the U.S., without taxes, were $2.00 per gallon. Suppose the U.S. government imposes a tax of $0.50 per gallon on the gas. Forces of demand and supply will determine how that $0.50 tax burden is distributed among the buyers and sellers. For example, it is possible that the price of gas, after the tax, might be $2.40. In such a case, buyers would be paying $0.40 of the tax while the sellers would be paying $0.10 of the tax.

INCOME TAX

Income tax is commonly a progressive tax because the tax rate increases with increasing income. For this reason, it is generally advocated by those who think that taxation should be borne more by the rich than by the poor, even to the point of serving as a form of social redistribution. Some critics characterize this tax as a form of punishment for economic productivity. Other critics charge that income taxation is inherently socially intrusive because enforcement requires the government to collect large amounts of information about business and personal affairs, much of which is considered proprietary and confidential.

Income tax fraud is a problem in most, if not all, countries implementing an income tax. Either one fails to declare income, or declares nonexistent expenses. Failure to declare income is especially easy for non-salaried work, especially those paid in cash. Tax enforcement authorities fight tax fraud using various methods, nowadays with the help of computer databases. They may, for instance, look for discrepancies between declared revenue and expenses along time. Tax enforcement authorities then target individuals for a tax audit – a more or less detailed review of the income and tax-deductible expenses of the individual.

Income tax may be collected from legal entities (e.g., companies) as well as natural persons (individuals), although, in some cases, the income tax on legal entities is levied on a slightly different basis than the income tax on individuals and may be called, in the case of income tax on companies, a corporation tax or a corporate income tax.

POLL TAX

A poll tax, also called a per capita tax, or capitation tax, is a tax that levies a set amount per individual. The earliest tax mentioned in the Bible of a half- shekel per annum from each adult Jew was a form of poll tax. Poll taxes are regressive, since they take the same amount of money (and hence, a higher proportion of income) for poorer individuals as for richer individuals. Poll taxes are difficult to cheat.

VALUE ADDED TAX

A value added tax (sometimes called a goods and services tax, as in Australia and Canada) applies the equivalent of a sales tax to every operation that creates value. To give an example, sheet steel is imported by a machine manufacturer. That manufacturer will pay the VAT on the purchase price, that amount to the government. The manufacturer will then transform the steel into a machine, selling the machine for a higher price to a wholesale distributor. The manufacturer will collect the VAT on the higher price, but will remit to the government only the excess related to the "value added" (the price over the cost of the sheet steel). The wholesale distributor will then continue the process, charging the retail distributor the VAT on the entire price to the retailer, but remitting only the amount related to the distribution markup to the government. The last VAT amount is paid by the eventual retail customer who cannot recover any of the previously paid VAT. Economic theorists have argued that this minimizes the market distortion resulting from the tax, compared to a sales tax.

VAT was historically used when a sales tax or excise tax was uncollectible. For example, a 30% sales tax is so often cheated that most of the retail economy will go off the books. By collecting the tax at each production level, and requiring the previous production level to collect the next level tax in order to recover the VAT previously paid by that production level, the theory is that the entire economy helps in the enforcement. In reality, forged invoices and the like demonstrate that tax evaders will always attempt to cheat the system.

Taxation

To tax (from the Latin taxo; "I estimate") is to impose a financial charge or other levy upon a taxpayer by a state or the functional equivalent of a state such that failure to pay is punishable by law. Taxes are also imposed by many subnational entities. Taxes consist of direct tax or indirect tax, and may be paid in money or as its labour equivalent. A tax may be defined as a "pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property owners to support the government, a payment exacted by legislative authority." The legal definition and the economic definition of taxes differ in that economists do not consider many transfers to governments to be taxes. For example, some transfers to the public sector are comparable to prices. Examples include tuition at public universities and fees for utilities provided by local governments. Governments also obtain resources by creating money (e.g., printing bills and minting coins), through voluntary gifts (e.g., contributions to public universities and museums), by imposing penalties (e.g., traffic fines), by borrowing, and by confiscating wealth. From the view of economists, a tax is a non-penal, yet compulsory transfer of resources from the private to the public sector levied on a basis of predetermined criteria and without reference to specific benefit received. In modern taxation systems, taxes are levied in money; The method of taxation and the government expenditure of taxes raised is often highly debated in politics and economics. Tax collection is performed by a government agency such as Canada Revenue Agency, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) in the United States, or Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) in the UK. When taxes are not fully paid, civil penalties (such as fines or forfeiture) or criminal penalties (such as incarceration) may be imposed on the non-paying entity or individual. Purposes and effects Money provided by taxation has been used by states and their functional equivalents throughout history to carry out many functions. Some of these include expenditures on war, the enforcement of law and public order, protection of property, economic infrastructure (roads, legal tender, enforcement of contracts, etc.), public works, social engineering, and the operation of government itself. Governments also use taxes to fund welfare and public services. These services can include education systems, health care systems, pensions for the elderly, unemployment benefits, and public transportation. Energy, water and waste management systems are also common public utilities. Colonial and modernizing states have also used cash taxes to draw or force reluctant subsistence producers into cash economies.

C. Translate the text below into Russian: In economics spring is the season when millions of people in many countries begin to sort their previous year's income and expense records – the first step in determining their personal income tax. In calculating this tax, you are allowed to take specific types of deductions and exemptions. Some deductions that may be made (within limits) from your income are donations to your alma mater and to various non-profit organizations. The amount of income tax you must pay at a given income level depends on several things. These include whether you are single or married and what the particular tax rates happen to be at the time. The rates are usually revised by the government every few years. Tax is money compulsory levied by the state or local authorities on individuals, property, or businesses. In modern economies taxes are the most important source of government revenues. Taxes can be levied and classified in many ways. In many countries there are three principal types of taxes: taxes on income, taxes on wealth and taxes on activities. Taxes are considered to have three functions: a) fiscal or budgetary, to cover government expenditure, to provide the public authorities with the revenue required for meeting the cost of defence, social services, municipal services, etc.; 66 b) economic, to give effect to economic policy, to promote stable economic growth; c) social, to increase the economic welfare of the community, to lessen inequalities in the distribution of income and wealth.

TAXATION

Everyone knows that taxation is necessary in a modern state: without it, it would not be possible to pay the soldiers and policemen who protect us: nor the workers in government offices who look after our health, our food, our water, and all things that we cannot do for ourselves, nor also the ministers and members of parliament who govern the country for us. By means of taxation we pay for things' that we need just as much as we need somewhere to live and something to eat.

In most countries, a direct tax on persons, which is called income tax exists. It is arranged in such a way, that the poorest people pay nothing, and the percentage of tax grows greater as the taxpayer's income grows. But countries with direct taxation always have indirect taxation, too. Many things imported into the country have to pay taxes or "duties". Of course, it is the men and women who buy these imported things in the shops who really have pay the duties, in the form of higher prices. In some countries, too, there is a tax on things sold in the shops. If the most necessary things are taxed, a lot of money is collected, but the poor people suffer most. If necessary things like jewels and fur coats are taxed, less money is obtained, but the tax is fairer, as the rich pay it. Probably this last kind of indirect tax, together with a direct tax on incomes which is low for the poor and high for the rich, is the best arrangement.

A market is anywhere that buyers and sellers come together to exchange goods and services. Market research is of great importance for any business. Market research can be defined as a collection, collation and analysis of data relating to the marketing and consumption of goods and services. For example, firms gather information about the likely consumers of a new product and use the data to help in their decision making process. Market research includes the following aspects:

- a demand for a product
- what style, shape color or Form it should take
- the price people can pay for it
- information about themselves - their age, likes, interests and life styles.

Market research can either be carried out by a firm itself or by a market research agency. The research involves collecting primary data. This is information which has to be collected to gain marketing advantages over other firms. Most primary information is gathered by asking consumers questions or by observing their behavior. The most accurate way to do this is to ask or observe all consumers of a particular product. However, this may be either impractical or expensive. That's why there are some other research methods a business can use. Among them are: questionnaires, personal and telephone interviews, postal surveys, observation and many others.

Answer the following questions using the text:

Competition

Economic competition is another essential feature of a free enterprise economy. Competition, as economists see it, is essentially price competition. The model of the market economy envisages a situation where, in the market for each commodity, there are large number of buyers and sellers. In theory at least, competition is the regulatory mechanism of capitalism. On the one hand, it protects the customers – they have the right of choice and they benefit from the fact that competition keeps prices close to costs; on the other hand, it makes producers and suppliers of scarce resources utilize them economically, using most sophisticated technologies.

E Which is true?

- Competition makes prices lower.
- Competition makes prices higher.
- The influence of competition is difficult to predict.

F Markets and Prices

Perhaps the most basic feature of the market economy is the use of the price mechanism for allocating resources to various uses. The price system is an elaborate system of communications in which innumerable free choices are aggregated and balanced against each other. The decisions of producers determine the supply of a commodity; the decisions of buyers determine the price.

Changes in demand and supply cause changes in market prices and it is these movements in market prices, which bring about the changes in the ways in which society uses its economic resources.

F Who determines the price in the market?

G The role of government

Freedom of enterprise is not total in the market economy. Businesses are subject to laws and government regulations. Economic environment is determined by the economic policies of the government, fiscal and monetary policies being the major factors.

G What does the underlined phrase mean in the text?

- Businesses are regulated by government.
- Government regulates businesses.
- Businesses are independent from laws and government regulations.

Read the text and do the exercises.

In economics, goods can be categorized in many different ways. One of the most common distinctions is based on two characteristics: excludability and rivalrousness. That means we categorize goods depending on whether people can be prevented from consuming them (excludability) and whether individuals can consume them without affecting their availability to other individuals (rivalrousness).

Based on those two criteria, we can classify all physical products into four different types of goods: private goods, public goods, common resources, and club goods.

Private Goods

Private Goods are products that are excludable and rival. They have to be purchased before they can be consumed. Thus, anyone who cannot afford private goods is excluded from their consumption. Likewise, the consumption of private goods by an individual prevents other individuals from consuming the same goods. Therefore, private goods are also considered rival goods. Examples of private goods include ice cream, cheese, houses, cars, etc.

Public Goods

Public goods describe products that are non-excludable and non-rival.

That means no one can be prevented from consuming them, and individuals can use them without reducing their availability to other individuals. Examples of public goods include fresh air, knowledge, national defense, street lighting, etc.

Common Resources

Common resources are defined as products or resources that are nonexcludable but rival. That means virtually anyone can use them. However, if one individual consumes common resources, their availability to other individuals is reduced. The combination of those two characteristics often results in an overuse of common resources (see also the tragedy of the commons). Examples of common resources include freshwater, fish, timber, pasture, etc.

Club Goods

Club goods are products that are excludable but non-rival. Thus, individuals can be prevented from consuming them, but their consumption does not reduce their availability to other individuals (at least until a point of overuse or congestion is reached). Club goods are sometimes also referred to as artificially scarce resources. They are often provided by natural monopolies. Examples of club goods include cable television, cinemas, wireless internet, toll roads, etc.

Marketing is a new science. What has been around previously is the art of salesmanship. Salesmanship is the art of manufacturing something and making another person want it, then manufacturing it for him.

The fundamental principles for a marketer are:

- to understand the customer (through research);
- to create a choice (a difference in price, concept or value that will distinguish your product);
- to communicate that choice (through promotion and advertising).

There are four principal controllable factors that provide the most effective choice for the consumer - the Four P's or the marketing mix: product, price, place and promotion.

Product

Marketing specialists do studies and take surveys to find out what goods and services people need or want to buy. Then goods and services are produced to meet those needs and desires. Products are designed to include qualities such as colors, models, styles, and features – that the business expects to be most appealing to consumers.

Marketing techniques include:

- street Surveys – stopping people in the street;
- phone or postal surveys – people fill in questionnaires and send them back;
- internet surveys – a relatively new technique which functions in a similar way to other surveys except that a large number of people are interviewed at the same time.

Price

Manufacturers and sellers must determine a price for their products or services. The price must be low enough to attract buyers. However, it must be high enough to generate a profit and cover the costs and expenses that the business has in producing, distributing, and selling the product.

Promotion

Promotion means all of those activities that go into telling consumers about the product and trying to persuade consumers to buy it. These include advertising, in-store displays, sales, coupons, and games.

Promotion also includes various kinds of personal selling. When salesclerks in a store help you select an item, they are promoting the product.

Promotion also includes offering products door to door, on television, or over the telephone.

Place

Place refers to where the product or service is sold. Marketers want to place goods where buyers will find them most conveniently. Place means both the location of offices and stores and the location of goods within a store. Fast-food stands and auto dealerships are located on major highways. Real estate and law offices are usually found in a city or town's business district. Shoe stores, dress shops, and department stores may be located in downtown shopping areas or malls.

Items in supermarkets and drugstores are often carefully situated to maximise sales. Toys and games, for example, are usually located at the eye level of children because marketers know that they are the ones who are most likely to want those products. Groups of products, such as different brands of shampoos or different varieties of salad dressings, are nearly always displayed on the same shelves. This way shoppers can find the brands they want and compare prices.

Read the text about pricing strategies and find out:

- why companies set high prices for their goods;
- why companies set low prices for their goods.

HOW MUCH?

As all Business students know, the fundamentals of marketing are the 4 Ps – product, place, price and promotion. Of these 4, price might seem the easiest to decide – how much does it cost me to produce this product or service and how much do I think customers will be prepared to pay for it?

However, choosing a suitable pricing strategy is every bit as complex as the other parts of the mix and your overall marketing strategy is unlikely to be successful if the price is wrong. Let's take a look at a few of the numerous pricing strategies that could make or break a business.

Premium pricing

Premium pricing sets a relatively high price to reflect the high quality of the product or service. This is the reason that some hotels are so much more expensive than others – they know that being so expensive will be seen by customers as a mark of quality.

Penetration pricing

New products and services are sold at an artificially low price in order to attract customers and gain market share. When the product is established, the price goes up. In recent years a number of mobile telephone networks have used this approach in the UK.

Economy pricing

Costs are kept to a minimum, with very little spent on manufacture or marketing. This is reflected in a low priced product which will hopefully sell in large volumes. Many supermarkets offer a range of products at economy prices. Typically, these products will have simple packaging and a general ‘no frills’ approach.

Price skimming

Price skimming aims to exploit a commercial advantage by charging a high price while there are few competitors. However, the high price attracts new competitors and the price falls because of the increase in supply and in competition.

Тема 9.1. Валовой внутренний продукт

GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT.

Gross Domestic Productor GDP is the amount of money a country makes from goods and services inside the country for a certain period of time, usually for a year.

When GDP is calculated different sectors of economy are analysed.

In the United Kingdom the following sectors of economy are usually analysed: manufacturing, services (financial, professional and scientific services, leisure and tourism), energy (oil, natural gas, coal) and agriculture. In the United States the following sectors of economy are usually analysed when the GDP is defined: construction and manufacturing; trade and finance; transport, communication and services; agriculture; and mining.

Speaking, as an example, about one of the recent year's GDP figures, the following can be quoted:

In the U.K. the services sector accounted for roughly 60 per cent of Gross Domestic Product. Manufacturing sector accounted for a small percentage of gross domestic product. Energy production sector accounted for about 8 per cent of GDP. Agriculture — only for 4 per cent of GDP. But the agricultural sector satisfies two-thirds of the country's needs. And only small fractions of the total population, about 2 per cent, are engaged in agriculture.

In the U.S.A. the construction and manufacturing sector accounted for 40 per cent of GDP; trade and finance earned 25 per cent of GDP; transport, communication and services sector earned 20 per cent of GDP; agriculture and mining earned 5 per cent of GDP. By the way 10 per cent of the employed population of the United States is engaged in agriculture.

Globalization

Globalization is a process of interaction (взаимодействие) and integration among the people, companies, and governments of different nations, a process driven by international trade and investment and aided by information technology. This process has effects on the environment, on culture, on political systems, on economic development and prosperity, and on human physical well-being in societies around the world.

Globalization is not new, though. For thousands of years, people—and, later, corporations—have been buying from and selling to each other in lands at great distances, such as through the famed Silk Road across Central Asia that connected China and Europe during the Middle Ages. Likewise, for centuries, people and corporations have invested in enterprises in other countries. In fact, many of the features of the current wave of globalization are similar to those prevailing before the outbreak of the First World War in 1914.

But policy and technological developments of the past few decades (десятилетия) have increased cross-border trade, investment, and migration so large that many observers believe the world has entered a qualitatively new phase in its economic development.

In the years since the Second World War many governments have adopted free-market economic systems, vastly increasing their own productive potential and creating new opportunities for international trade and investment. Governments also have negotiated dramatic reductions in barriers to commerce and have established international agreements to promote trade in goods, services, and investment. Taking advantage of new opportunities in foreign markets, corporations have built foreign factories and established production and marketing arrangements with foreign partners. A defining feature of globalization, therefore, is an international industrial and financial business structure.

Technology has been the other principal driver of globalization. Advances in information technology, in particular, have dramatically transformed economic life. Globalization is deeply controversial (спорный, противоречивый, дискуссионный), however. Proponents (защитники, сторонники) of globalization argue that it allows poor countries and their citizens to develop economically and raise their standards of living, while opponents of globalization claim that the creation of an unfettered international free market has benefited multinational corporations in the Western world at the expense of local enterprises, local cultures, and common people. Resistance to globalization has therefore taken shape both at a popular and at a governmental level as people and governments try to manage the flow of capital, labor, goods, and ideas that constitute the current wave of globalization.

To find the right balance between benefits and costs (доходы и издержки) associated with globalization, citizens of all nations need to understand how globalization works and the policy choices facing them and their societies.
